

OUR VISION IS EXTENSIVE

Construction at TCU isn't limited to the center of campus. Here are a few of the other projects underway:

Education is complex

Tripling the size of the School of Education facility will be complete in 2007 when a 23,000-square-foot building is finished and attached to the historic Bailey Building by a modern glass atrium. The Bailey Building will be gutted and reconfigured, and its original 1914 façade restored.

Outside in

A building over the artificial turf southwest of Daniel-Meyer Coliseum will provide a climate-controlled practice area for our field sport teams. The building, which will be complete by late fall 2006, will include equipment storage for football and track. Below are preliminary drawings.

Something new is in store

Plans for a second-floor addition (below) to the back end of the TCU Bookstore on Berry Street were put on hold following a spring 2006 fire. But once the smoke clears, and news plans are approved, the Barnes & Noble-managed store will be bigger and better than ever.
